

Hello everyone,

I hope you're all well this week and you enjoyed your weekend. Mrs. Kelly filled me in on all the brilliant work you did last week so well done.

Below, is a list of work for each day this week. Try your best as always to complete as much of it as you can, but don't feel under pressure to complete all of it. I will post an art activity on Friday. Any extra activities will be posted on Seesaw and are totally optional, maybe for when you're finished early or want a distraction. All of the links you will need are included, and if you have any questions you can ask me on Seesaw.

Take care everyone and stay safe and well.

Ms. O'Brien

Jar of Positivity

This week I'd like you to make a jar of positivity, to help focus all of us on the positives each day, especially at the moment when we are experiencing loneliness and uncertainty and really missing our former routines, our sports, our extra-curricular activities, our school life, our friends and our families and lots more too! These little messages will help us see the positives in every day, especially the more difficult days.

- Get a jar of any shape or size and decorate it with a label and some ribbon/twine around the neck of the jar. I will upload some examples of positivity jars on Seesaw this morning.
- You will also need some paper, different colours if you have it but it really doesn't matter as you can decorate the scraps of paper with love hearts, butterflies rainbows etc
- On the pieces of paper write statements of what you want in your life, you can write anything positive that's happened, that you've done, heard seen or experienced. You should be able to cram the jar full of lovely little messages of happiness
- I will upload some lists of positive thoughts/quotes and affirmations to Seesaw that you can include if you wish
- Once you've completed enough positive thoughts/memories/statements etc place them inside your jar
- Keep your Jar of Positivity close at hand and each morning take out one piece of paper and read it and keep that positive thought to the forefront of your mind for the day
